

Joyce Lapping

Joyce Lapping has been the director of Prior Learning Assessment at the University of Southern Maine for the past eight years. Previous to that time, she was an assistant professor of Economics and advisor at the same university. As the director of Prior Learning Assessment, Joyce guides students through the process of assessing their college-level learning accrued outside the traditional classroom, building a bridge between their practical, applied learning experiences and their theoretical college-level learning competencies. The office works with all colleges, and both graduate and undergraduate programs within the University of Southern Maine, as well as the University of Maine System. Joyce holds a Masters Degree in Economics from Hunter College, CUNY, and a Bachelor in Economics from SUNY at New Paltz. She also has postgraduate courses in Consumer Economics from the University of Missouri, and in addition, holds certification from the Institute of Prior Learning Assessment from the Council of Adult Experiential Learning (CAEL).