

Bruce L. Mallory

Bruce L. Mallory was appointed Provost and Executive Vice President at the University of New Hampshire in July 2003 and served until July 2009. Previously, he was Senior Vice Provost and Dean of the Graduate School at UNH (1997-2003). He currently serves as director of the Carsey Institute (2011-2014), and he teaches in the areas of higher education, education and poverty, and social change.

Dr. Mallory received the Ph.D. in Special Education and Community Psychology from George Peabody College of Vanderbilt University (1979). His scholarship has concentrated on the design of programs and social policies that support young children with disabilities and their families, cross-cultural research in developed and developing countries regarding disability and child care policy, and the role of deliberative democratic practices in community change and higher education reform. He has served as a consultant to the American Council on Education's Institute for New Chief Academic Officers. Dr. Mallory is co-founder and director of New Hampshire Listens, a civic engagement initiative of the Carsey Institute at UNH. He also serves on the board of the Paul J. Aicher Foundation and is a member of the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.
