

Karen Muncaster

Karen Muncaster is currently the Vice President for the Rabb School of Continuing Studies at Brandeis University. She came to this position from her post as Vice President for Professional and Continuing Education at Boston Architectural College. Prior to that, she served as Associate Vice President of Academic Technology and Program Design at Lesley University in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Earlier she was the Dean of Continuing Education at Southern New Hampshire University. She also worked at Middlesex Community College in Massachusetts for eleven years, first as the Director of Services for Students with Disabilities and then as the Director of Continuing Education. She holds a B.S. from Indiana University, an M.Ed. from Tufts University, and a Ph.D. from Boston College. Much of her work focuses on serving adult students, supporting part-time faculty and launching successful online programming. She is a Commissioner for the CIHE of NEASC.