

Terry W. Hartle

Senior Vice President, American Council on Education, Washington DC

Terry Hartle is one of America's most effective and experienced advocates for higher education. At ACE, where he has served for more than 20 years, he directs comprehensive efforts to engage federal policymakers on a broad range of issues including student aid, government regulation, scientific research and tax policy. His work involves representation before the U.S. Congress, administrative agencies and the federal courts. He plays a central part in developing public policy positions that impact all colleges and universities. He oversees the Council's external relations functions and Higher Education for Development (HED), which supports the global development goals of the United States Agency for International Development (USAID). Prior to 1993, Hartle served as education staff director for the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, chaired by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. He received a doctorate in public policy from The George Washington University (DC), a master's in public administration from Syracuse University (NY), and a bachelor's degree from Hiram College (OH). He has authored or co-authored numerous articles, books, and national studies and contributes regular book reviews to The Christian Science Monitor.