

Jonathan Paul

Assistant Vice President, Finance and Director, Office of Financial Strategy and Planning, Harvard University, Cambridge, MA

As Assistant Vice President for Finance, Jonathan leads the team that drives strategic financial planning, and is responsible for developing and framing financial strategy and policy for review by University leadership and governing boards. In addition, his team partners with senior School and University leadership when considering investments associated with strategic initiatives and long-term academic plans, and on the preparation and execution of Harvard's operating and capital budgets. His office also collaborates with the Schools' senior administrators, with an eye toward reaching agreement on University-wide approaches to optimize the efficiency, effectiveness and impact of financial planning activities.
