

Charles Dorn

Charles Dorn is Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Professor of Education at Bowdoin College. After receiving his BA from George Washington University, Dorn spent the first ten years of his career as a high school social studies teacher. He has a Master's degree from Stanford University and Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. In 2012-2013, Dorn received a U.S. State Department Fulbright Award to the University of Cape Town, South Africa. He has published in the American Journal of Education, Diplomatic History, Teachers College Record, and History of Education Quarterly and is the author of American Education, Democracy, and the Second World War (Palgrave Macmillan, 2007). His most recent book, For the Common Good: A New History of Higher Education in America, was published in 2017 by Cornell University Press.